Oddly-named Variety Show rips the still-beating heart out of traditional entertainment.

Melbourne, 30 January 2006

Just last week, the Melbourne entertainment scene was taken by storm (or at least heavy rain) by a new LIVE variety show, The Pink Horse of Whimsy (PHoW).

PHoW showcases some of Melbourne's best established and upcoming comedians, musicians and filmmakers, and is hosted by the cheeky and energetic Danny Alder and ticking emotional time-bomb Dan Walmsley.

Showing every Wednesday for five weeks, from the 25th of January to the 22nd of February, last week's debut episode shattered all expectations and left the audience slumped in a steaming naked heap, begging for more. The sophomore show will feature comedians Simon Scott, Lou Pardi and headliner Adam Vincent. Sam Lohs from Fruit (<http://www.fruitmusic.com.au/>) will provide the musical accompaniment, and Simon Scott has submitted a mysterious short film.

Also this week, filling in for Danny Alder is a guest co-host, the discomfitingly sexual Richard McKenzie.

The show is on upstairs at Vibe on Smith (123 Smith Street, Collingwood) and entry is $5.
